

Cash Crop by Kay Bernadas

You are cotton
soft and forgiving
warming and
easy-to-wear
comfortable
breathing
white-blue
almost pink
in the light
mineral rich blood
borne of southern soil
the finest the New World has to offer you swept the south
lost the war
took her down
as she took handful after handful after handful
and yet still she had barely enough